Prehistoric Tool Kit for Surviving

This presentation is concentrated in more than ten pile dwelling settlements located on the shores of the Ohrid Lake or rivers in the Ohrid region. Chronologically, these prehistoric sites are not from the same period, and they date from the Neolithic to the Iron Age. Remains from these settlements offer more detailed insight into the prehistoric lifestyle. The focus will be given on tools used by people who lived in these regions and help them to survive and live traces of their existence. Their function and meaning, however, is not always clear but...

Why did people choose the northern part of Ohrid lake? Did they have textile production and what tools help them to survive?
